The Edinburgh Companion to the Gaelic Language-Moray Watson 2010 Bringing together an unprecedented range of perspectives on the Gaelic language, this book covers the history of the language, its development in Scotland and Canada, its spelling, syntax and morphology, its modern vocabulary, and the study of its dialects. It also addresses sociolinguistic issues such as identity, perception, language planning and the appearance of the language in literature. Each chapter is written by an expert on their topic.

The book has been written accessibly with a non-specialist audience in mind. It will have a particular value for those requiring introductions to aspects of the Gaelic language. It will also be of great interest to those who are embarking on research on Gaelic for the first time. Authors include Colm O. Baoill, David Adger, Rob Dunbar, Seosamh Watson, Ken Nilsen, Ken MacKinnon and Ronald Black.

History of Phoenicia-George Rawlinson 1889
Egypt of the Pharaohs-Alan Henderson Gardiner 1961 The mysteries of Ancient Egypt, the wonderland of the Pharaohs, have always held the world in awe. Now available in new covers, this volume provides a comprehensive history of this fascinating land from its earliest days to the conquest of Alexander the Great in 332 B.C. Gardiner presents background on Egyptian language, the writing, the land, its neighbors, and resources, with a special section devoted to the Egyptian method of determining chronological dates. He then follows with a concise history of Egypt from the time of the Old Kingdom, through the Ramesside period, up to the last days of Egyptian independence around 323 B.C. Authoritative and meticulously researched, Egypt of the Pharaohs is an enticing introduction to the study of this ancient civilization.

Ruined by Design-Inger Sigrun Brodey 2013-01-11 By examining the motif of ruination in a variety of late-eighteenth-century domains, this book portrays the moral aesthetic of the culture of sensibility in Europe, particularly its negotiation of the demands of tradition and pragmatism alongside utopian longings for authenticity, natural goodness, self-governance, mutual transparency, and instantaneous kinship. This book argues that the rhetoric of ruins lends a distinctive shape to the architecture and literature of the time and requires the novel to adjust notions of authorship and narrative to accommodate the prevailing aesthetic. Just as architects of eighteenth-century follies pretend to have discovered "authentic" ruins, novelists within the culture of sensibility also build purposely fragmented texts and disguise their authorship, invoking highly artificial means of simulating nature. The cultural pursuit of human ruin, however, leads to hypocritical and sadistic extremes that put an end to the characteristic ambivalence of sensibility and its unusual structures.

Grains of Sand-Margaret J. Carr 2012-11-03

Closing weeks of 1899. The Mason family return from Ceylon to make a new life in the Victorian seaside town of Southport, in the north west of England. Sarah and Alexander Mason eagerly await the birth of their 2nd child, they hope will be a boy. William is born early on in the new century. Then in a local park Louisa, the Masons' lonely, confused little daughter meets, for the first time, a young ragamuffin called Millie. Their friendship will play an integral part in Louisa's life, albeit against the strong wishes of Louisa's father. Through family tragedy and two world wars, the Masons' lives unfold as generation after generation, chapter after chapter, the years finally lead up to 2000. A new year, a new century and a New Millennium. Only William Mason, born at the very start of the twentieth century, lives on. His children, grandchildren and great grandchildren decide to give this grand old man a special treat to celebrate his 100 year birthday. They will give him the time of his life.

Kama Kameez-Ben Shalmon 2001-04-01 Born nearly 4000 years ago in a village in the vicinity of Ur, to poor landless parents, Kama (meaning "first") Kameez (meaning "resilient"), sought to escape his humble origins. His grandfather, who was his confidant and was privy to his plans, predicted that Kama would eventually succeed and make his fortune - but only in a far-distant land and among a foreign people. Kama Kameez fled his parents' home when he was barely sixteen and then sojourned in remote villages, in the Elam city of Susa, and in the mountainous countryside of Karaman. A village scribe taught him the art of writing and reading, and he recorded his memoirs on tablets and scrolls.

When seventeen years old, he fell in love with Tubabah, the beautiful daughter of a village chief. Much against her father's will, she joined Kama Kameez, and they fled by boat. When they reached Susa, the local commander (the "Lugal") arrested them for trespassing and for blasphemous behavior. This Lugal, a treacherous person, expelled Kama Kameez from Susa and assigned Tubabah to his harem. Kama Kameez journeyed eastward. He eventually reached the mountains of Karaman where he encountered a gravely ill priest. This priest led him to a bounteous secret garden, with fruits capable of inducing physical rejuvenation. He collected some of the fruits and brought them back with him to Susa. This time, when he entered the city, he was much more mature and was disguised as a noble merchant attached to the king's court. By means of subterfuge he managed to free Tubabah, but when his true identity was discovered, he was once again arrested. His presence in the city created mayhem and heavy fighting among the Lugal's officers. With Tubabah, he escaped to the countryside, where his own young slave robbed him. While he searched for the missing slave, a band of roving vagabonds kidnapped his pregnant wife, and he was unable to trace her for a great many months. After retrieving the valuables and the fruits that his slave had stolen, Kama returned once more to Susa, where the community leaders, believing him to be of noble birth, elevated him to the position of city commander. He succeeded in imposing peace and prosperity, accumulating great personal wealth as well, ruling the city for nearly two years. Near the close of his reign, his wife Tubabah rode into the city with their little son. She had managed to escape her captors with the help of a Hittite slave. Kama Kameez returned to the village of his ancestors, where his parents failed to recognize him. He acquired much land and cattle, built imposing structures, and became the confidant of the King of Ur. And enemies arose to challenge Kama Kameez in the city of Ur. They demanded that the king punish Kama Kameez and his wife Tubabah for belittling the city's gods, and the king ordered that Tubabah be arrested and kept prisoner in the great temple presided over by his sister the high priestess. Kama Kameez managed to rescue Tubabah from the temple by means of a daring subterfuge, by smuggling a salve into the temple that caused the temporary appearance of leprosy on her skin. The high priestess panicked and released Tubabah, but she became furious at Kama Kameez when she discovered that he had misled her. She demanded that he present himself before her in the temple, and when he appeared, she found that she was most impressed by his looks and by his character. She fell in love with him and ordered him to learn the ways of her gods so that he could rule at her side in the temple as a high priest. Kama Kameez, who had lost faith in idols and local deities, tried to cajole her into allowing him to return to his estate and to his family. The high priestess imposed conditions: that he orders his slaves and his underlings to build an extension to her temple
